Trivia Night at the Gallery

So you think you know everything there is to know about what might not be important to know? Comox Valley Art Gallery invites you to come out for a fun filled and hilarious night of trivial pursuit on Friday March 11, 2011. Doors open at 6:30pm, game starts at 7pm sharp!

What is a trivia night and how does it work? Similar to the popular board game played at home, series of questions are asked and the goal is to get the most questions correct. At a trivia night, one person called the Quiz Master is chosen ahead of time to ask all the questions, rather than everyone taking turns. It keeps things running more smoothly. Also in this case, instead of individuals competing, teams of 8 people work together, putting their efforts in to agree on one answer per question. The team with the most number of correct questions wins the main prize. The teams will be competing for prizes and (mostly) glory! CVAG will be able to register 10 teams.

Local architect Martin Hagarty will cook up a feast of questions; topics will range from art to sports, entertainment, history, popular culture, animals and more! With Quiz Master Martin at the helm, it is sure to be an entertaining evening. There will also be a cash bar and some light refreshments.

Teams will consist of 8 persons; cost is $10 per person. Individuals may also register and will be assigned to a team. If you would like to register a team or donate a small prize please contact Anh at 338-6211. Comox Valley Art Gallery is located at 580 Duncan Avenue in downtown Courtenay.
